

Heather Lesage-Horton, MD

Additional Background

Dr. Lesage-Horton completed her undergraduate training and medical school at the University of Vermont graduating from medical school in 2009. She completed her pediatric residency at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital with the University of Michigan Health System in Ann Arbor, MI.

"I am excited to join the team at Brattleboro Primary Care to continue to provide excellent care for children in the Brattleboro area. I love to watch children and families grow while guiding them through developmental milestones. Caring for a newborn and then watching that newborn become a toddler and then school age child while both the child and parent gain confidence in their roles, is the best part of pediatrics. "

Dr. Lesage-Horton is a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics and Vermont Medical Society. She lives in Brattleboro with her husband, Mark Horton, with their 3 children, labradoodle, and chickens. When not working, she enjoys hiking and skiing with her family as well as gardening and quilting.
