

Alicia Veit, NP

Additional Background

Alicia Veit, MD joined Timber Lane Pediatrics in 2008 shortly after completing her residency at the University of Vermont based on a strong desire to remain in such a committed pediatric community. Originally from Philadelphia, she graduated from Bowdoin College in Maine (1998) and then continued her education at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine (2004) after working briefly in public health. She now lives in Hinesburg with her husband James Ulager, a family physician, and their two young daughters. She is a general pediatrician whose areas of interest range from early childhood development to adolescence. She believes strongly in preventive medicine, health education, and working in partnership with families, schools and community agencies. In her free time, she tries to be outside as much as possible, hiking and canoeing, and more recently, exploring every playground in Chittenden County at the request of her toddler.
